

Olive is doing a good job

I just wanted to share a situation and a thought with your readers.

I have been having a little problem that I have been dealing with. I saw Craig Olive, Johnston County Register of Deeds, and he asked if he could help me in the matter.

I knew that Mr. Olive could not help me because it was not dealing with his department. I found out how willing he was to help me and he referred me to a county commissioner.

It is not often that a public servant offers to help a citizen like he did. Most elected officials wouldn't want to hear any problems that are not pertaining to their area of expertise. I commend Mr. Olive for looking out for me. He made a great impression on me.

Recently in your March 25th edition of the Herald, I read where he was reducing fees in his office. It makes me proud that we have an elected official in Mr. Olive who is looking out for the public and not sitting around.

If my memory serves me right, I believe he campaigned on reducing fees in the election. Mr. Olive, please continue to keep up the great job that you are doing.
